EL FUTURO in LIZARDS OF LOBODO

There are people who will tell you that I am ageless. That I have lived for centuries. There are other people who claim that I know the many ancient secrets of the East. And there are even those who say that I belong to the future. I make no comments on these statements or on any of the other things that they say about me. I will admit only one thing: That where there is Evil in this world — I am dedicated to fighting it. That I am a friend of the birds that fly, the animals that roam our lands, and even the inhabitants of the sea is well known.

In many a fairy tale you read about the hero fighting some terrible dragon. Do dragons exist today? The answer is in the positive. On the famous island of Lobodo we have the only group of giant lizards that are still existing in this world today. The island itself is about 600 miles off northwest Australia. How these giant lizards got to the island is an unsolved mystery. They are protected by law and permitted to live without any interference by man. I received a coded message from the government out there to come out at once.

So I flew to Java by regular commercial plane. From there I was taken by a government boat to the heavily guarded island. Colonel Masara greeted me. Then explained the situation to me.

"As you know, the dragons will die in captivity. In order for them to survive they must remain on this island. In spite of all of our precautions three of them were stolen. We know how they were taken, why they were taken — and who has them now."

There was amazement on my face. Colonel Masara then cleared up matters for me.

"Li Chang is probably one of the richest men in the world. He made his fortune selling a popular cure-all medicine in the East. He owns banks, factories, railroads, ship yards and anything else you may think of. He offered us a small fortune for three of the dragons. We refused. So he bought a submarine and that is how they were stolen. Divers came ashore late at night. He has those three dragons on his estate in Hong Kong. Can you get them back for us?"

All I could say was that I would try. I watched a nine footer who weighed about 300 pounds in action. Actually we studied each other. Then the next day I returned to Java. And from there I flew to Hongkong. Government officials there arranged an appointment for me with Li Chang. In fact he even asked me to be a guest on his estate for a few days. His greeting was most cordial. But he came right to the point.

"I have my own private world-wide intelligence system. So I know you are here to try to regain those dragons. To me they represent good luck. So here they remain."

"But they will die," I protested. "And then what will you do?"

"Stuff them," he grinned "Dead or alive they are the symbols of the Goddess Ma Wing, who brings good fortune to men. Every step you make will be watched. So enjoy yourself here."

"Why not give them to me?" I asked. "In return I promise that when three die on the island, they will be stuffed and sent to you."

He said nothing. But I knew I had planted the germ of an idea in his mind. The next morning I asked permission to see and play with the three dragon lizards. He was curious and he and his men soon were watching me as I touched the friendly creatures. Then to the surprise of Li Chang, each rolled over and became rigid! He rushed up to them. Looked at me.

"You have the touch of Death in your fingers. Leave now and take them with you."

Before the day had ended I was in a chartered plane flying back to Java with the three rigid dragon lizards. Again a government took me to the island. Colonel Masara was sad as he looked at the three creatures. Then I touched each of them along the neck muscle. And they crept along the ground.

"So it is true you do know the secrets of the East," he said to me.

"At least a secret known to modern science," I grinned. "That was suspended animation! However, notify Li Chang that you will send him three stuffed ones — not these of course — when the others die. In return, let him make a cash donation to one of the refugee organizations in my name."
